KANSAS STATE NEWS.

AN imaginative correspondent of an Eastern paper writes that there is a small town in Kansas, and it is called Viorie, and has a population of 1,000. It makes its own laws, passes sentences of death, regulates all matters of equity, and dictates the religious and social status. Viorie has no hotel, no place for a stranger. He could get nothing to eat only at private houses. It was settled by a company of religious bigots in the spring of 1885, since which time select families have been added. In the beginning it was decreed that all things should be held in common; houses, however small, should be built of brick, and extravagance, flattery, fancy work should not be tolerated. Their theory is to buy nothing and to sell nothing. All must go to work very early in the morning, and work just so long and so hard as they choose, unless an edict is issued by the Prudent for more diligence. The Prudent consists of twelve men, selected by their own body when vacancies arise. They hold a life tenure. They settle all disputes, regulate all industries and divide the crops. There are really no stores, but there are three large buildings used as storehouses, where the different products are nicely kept. In one room was stored an ample supply of whisky, to which the correspondent evidently had free access, and under the inspiration of which was written the article on Viorie.

It also cites the notice published in the papers in May last by John Walruff, in which he denies the right of the authorities to close up the business, when he has made every endeavor to secure a permit to manufacture according to law, which permit was refused him. This is the first case brought in the State under the injunction clause of the new Prohibitory Law and will be made a test case.

TWO OF A KIND.

A Singular Sarcomatous Coincidence—A Young Man Afflicted With and Operated Upon For a Tumor Identical in Character and Location With One Which Caused the Death of His Affected.

New York, September 15.—Francis Joseph Gunner, aged twenty, the son of Police Captain John Gunner, of 362 E. Sixty-ninth street, was the subject of a delicate and interesting surgical operation performed on Wednesday last by Dr. Post, of 291 Madison avenue, and W. A. Hawes, of 745 Lexington avenue, for the removal of a sarcoma, a species of tumor. The inception and development of this tumor was exceedingly peculiar, and either presents the features of a remarkable coincidence or a demonstration of the fact that tumors are contagious, a thing that has heretofore been most emphatically denied by the medical profession. Young Mr. Gunner was a regular attendant of St. Thomas Episcopal Chapel, on Sixty-sixth, between Second and third avenues, and held the office of Assistant Librarian in the Seminary School connected with the church. About a year ago Miss Bella Sargent, a charming young woman of about the same age as Mr. Gunner, joined the church and became a teacher in the Sunday-school. Gunner and Miss Sargent were thrown much together in the Sunday-school work and formed a pleasant acquaintance that in time ripened into love, and it was announced last spring that they were engaged to be married, but it was not to be. Miss Sargent died in the Roosevelt Hospital last July and was buried on Declaration Day. About three months before her death an apparently innocent swelling appeared in the gum on the inside of the right cheek. Nothing was thought of for a time, and it was attributed to cold and a harmless inflammation. But it grew larger, slowly at first, but with an alarming rapidity as it became developed, and she as well as her friends became alarmed and sought medical advice. Her ailment was pronounced a sarcoma of the malignant type, and she went to the Roosevelt Hospital for treatment. Soon after she was admitted a consultation was held in her case by the consulting surgeons and the house staff, and it was agreed that Dr. Hawes, who had been benefited by the removal of the tumor, should operate. She consenting, an operation was performed by Dr. Sands in the presence of Dr. Shady and several other physicians. The tumor was a large one, but it had involved the jaw-bone to a considerable extent and a section of it was also removed. Miss Sargent rallied from the shock and hopes were entertained of her recovery, but within a few days a second hemorrhage occurred and she died in her death. The grief of Gunner over his loss was inconsolable and he brooded over the death of Miss Sargent day and night. There was to him a special horror in the manner of her death, which he was unable to get rid of. He was startled when a slight swelling appeared in his mouth in the gum on the inside of the left cheek. He at once consulted Dr. Hawes, but he suspected that the fate of Miss Sargent awaited him. There was nothing, however, in the early appearance of the swelling to indicate that it was anything serious, and it was pronounced a gumboil. It grew slowly, and presently what appeared to be an accumulation of pus, it was lanced and discharged a colorless liquid. There was no improvement or relief following this simple remedy and the clinical history of the case soon established that it was a sarcoma similar in character to that which had cost Miss Sargent her life, but not as far advanced. Dr. Post was called in consultation and a speedy extirpation of the tumor was advised. At two o'clock p. m. on Wednesday, the young man was put under the influence of ether. A knife was inserted by the surgeon at the left cheek bone and an incision was made under the left eye to the nose, down the side of the nose, and beneath it to the center of the upper lip, which was split in two. Then the left cheek was dissected up from the bone and turned back and the tumor was exposed to view. It was attached to the jawbone firmly, and was larger than it appeared to be externally. It was removed by a quick cut of the knife, and the entire bone in the neighborhood of the tumor was thoroughly scraped by a spoon-shaped instrument to remove such affected membranes as might be attached. After the surgeons were satisfied that every trace of the tumor was obliterated, the cheek flap was returned to position and deliberately stitched to the adjoining tissue. The operation lasted two hours, and was prolonged for the reason that either could not be given continuously, as the case holding it, when held over the nose and mouth of the patient, interfered with the movements of the surgeon, and he had to stop entirely while the ether was being administered. Gunner rallied rapidly from the shock of the operation, and was in a comfortable condition yesterday. The tumor, after it was secured, was placed in alcohol and was submitted to a microscopic examination to determine its character, whether benign or malignant. If it proves to be benign it is said the operation will be the last of it. But if it shows malignant elements similar to that in the case of Miss Sargent, the probabilities are that it will grow again and begin to grow where the surgeon's knife left off.

No Evidence of Foul Play.
BOSTON, Mass., September 15.—The report of the inquest in the case of Jno. Hovey, of Waltham, who was drowned off of Craycase bridge on the night of July 14th, was filed yesterday. The report says there is no evidence of unlawful violence.

A Drunken Man's Crime.
BOSTON, Mass., September 15.—Chas. Hayes, the mulatto murderer who was captured Sunday, was brought back here yesterday. He was nervous and excited. He said that on the night of the tragedy he came home to find that his wife had been drinking and said she was "on the warpath." He told her she kept too much negro company, whereupon she struck him. He tried to pacify her, and sent out for liquor, which both drank. What happened after that he does not remember. He pleaded guilty yesterday morning to a charge of wilful murder.
